what's NOW! LDD, ETC.

Pick Your Perfect LDD

From Bottega Veneta to Gucci, this easygoing look dominated the runways. The beauty, of course, is in its versatility: Pair it with gladiator heels, as seen at Chloé, or keep it casual with a belt à la L'Agence. "The LDD is flirty enough for the weekend and smart enough to wear all season long," says 3x1 founder Scott Morrison, who worked up his own fit-and-flare version (bottom, left).

TEARS IN HEAVEN

It makes sense that an Angel would have holy, err, holey jeans. Check out the '90s-inspired bottoms Victoria's Secret Angel Candice Swanepoel created for L.A. denim brand Mother: Each pair of the slouchy roll-ups is hand-sanded, tinted for a sun-dried look, then finished with individually placed holes on the knees, pockets, waistband, and hem. "There's something both playful and sexy about distressed denim," says the South African model. Bonus: $12 from the sale of each item benefits Mothers2Mothers, which helps fight pediatric AIDS.

Cotton and elastane jeans, Mother, $220; fwr.com.
